

Offley Palace is said to have been built in the eighth century by the Saxon King, Offa, from whom the village probably takes its name. According to local legend, Offley Palace once stood where Offley Place, currently a training and conference centre, now stands. However, it may have been at Little Offley, one of four manor houses in the parish. Much of it was built in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

The Three Springs Walk

With its sunken lanes, ancient hedges and irregularly shaped fields, the countryside around Offley is in many ways typical of much of the Chilterns. The sheep grazed meadows south of the Red Lion were once commonplace but are now unusual in this largely arable area.

While most of the route is through open farmland, there is much to be seen and enjoyed in the surviving hedgerows and small woodlands or 'springs'. Just past the second kissing gate is a huge ash, distinguished by its pale grey, ridged bark and multiple stems growing from a trunk bent onto its side. The tree's shape suggests that it was once a landmark or boundary tree, possibly laid as part of a hedge.

Following the byway to Glebe Farm, a strip of woodland and remnant hedge marks the historic boundary between Lilley and Offley parishes. You may see pheasant among the coppiced hazel and mature beech trees, a clue perhaps as to why this woodland cover has been allowed to survive. Elsewhere hedges have fared less well; some grubbed out to make way for farm machinery. Even here, we can still enjoy what remains - the lone holly bushes and pollarded hornbeam on Luton White Hill, and the broken line of oaks in the fields north of the A505.

Above Lilley Hoo Farm, the woodland makes a welcome change from open countryside. These trees are relatively young, having grown up on formerly grazed common land. Other wooded areas have been there much longer, as their names suggest. Mazebeard Spring, Newfield Spring and Mead Springs were probably small areas of coppiced woodland, the word spring referring to the regrowth of shoots from trees cut close to the ground. This traditional method of woodland management ensured a regular supply of material for fencing stakes and rural crafts.

This is one of a series of walks through the Chilterns Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB). It follows rights of way most of which are waymarked as follows:

-  Footpath (walkers only)
-  Bridleway (horse riders, cyclists and walkers)
-  Byway open to all traffic
-  Restricted Byway (horseriders, cyclists, walkers and non-mechanically propelled vehicles)
-  Please be considerate in the countryside - keep to footpaths, especially through crops, and leave farm gates as you find them.

How to get to Offley

The 100 and 101 bus routes connect bus and railway stations in Stevenage and Luton, stopping at Offley Post Office hourly, seven days a week.

From the bus stop, follow the short route shown on the map through the allotments, turning left to reach the King's Walden Road and then right towards the Red Lion pub. For further travel information call 0871 200 22 33 or visit www.Intalink.co.uk

The CMS 'Hitchin to the Chilterns' recreational cycle ride passes the Red Lion at Offley. You can download the leaflet off their web site www.hertslink.org/cms. If you need to come by car, please park in the Red Lion car park.

Notes on the walk

The Red Lion pub is in the oldest part of the village, known as Bottom End. With Offley Place and the Church close by, this area would have been the hub of the village in the days before the Offley Hill road. For the best views, you are recommended to do the walk in a clockwise direction, so begin by turning left out of the pub and taking the footpath on the other side of the lane.

To your left you will see Lilley church across the valley in the Chilterns Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty.

Please use these safe crossing points under/over the A505.
